The Future of Financial Transactions in Asia – Opportunities and Challenges

Since the last global financial crisis, firms have been dealing with its aftermath, including increased regulatory and legislative scrutiny. Many are seeking out and benefiting from the opportunities the Asian financial markets offer. Complex financial transactions in the region are on the rise and novel and complex financial products have proliferated in the last few years.

Join us for a look at the current financial landscape in Asia and how arbitration can be best used to mitigate risk should disputes in this specialist area arise. Our experts will guide you through selection of key topics including recent changes and developing trends in the Asian finance market, the legal issues that need to be considered in structuring financial transactions in the Asian region as well as in disputing such issues and where the next opportunities in Asia lie.
